"AT WHATEVER COST OF INDEPENDENT ACTION"

By L. C. MARTIN

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C. July 11—Senators opposing the League of Nations are today making much capital out of just six words uttered when the president addressed the Senate yesterday. They cite these six words as proof of their contention that the United States will stand committed to being robbed of its right to independence of action. The words are "at whatever cost of independent action." The President used these words in declaring that the world demanded a new order of international politics to obtain freedom and justice. Anti-leaguers believe that the President meant the term literally and that a literal interpretation of the words commits the U. S. to a policy, under the league, of an absolute surrender of independent action in world affairs.

MARCH ON THE CARPET

WASHINGTON, July 11—General March, Chief of Staff of the United States Army was today summoned before the Special House Committee investigating the food supply. He will be asked to explain why there was a six months delay in disposing of the surplus army food for which the government had no use and which would have materially affected living costs throughout the nation had it been put on the market.

DIRIGIBLE R-34 HALF WAY HOME

NEW YORK, July 11—Bowling along at a speed of sixty knots the British blimp R-34 is believed today to be more than half way across the Atlantic on her home journey to Scotland. The latest wireless received was as follows: "Speeding sixty knots to blighty. All is well."

LONDON, July 11—The Air Ministry announced today that the R-34 has wireless her position which shows that she is 1500 miles out from New York. She added that her supply of fuel was half consumed.

JAP AMBASSADOR ISHII RETIRES

TOKIO, JAPAN, July 3d. (Delayed)—Resignation of Aikuro Ishii as Ambassador to the United States and his retirement from public life has been announced. Ill health was given as the sole reason for the resignation. So far as is known no successor has been named.

ROME, July 10—Delayed—The general strike which has menaced this city was called off today at noon owing to the inability to get the strike authorized by the Chamber of Labor.

REPARATION, NOT KAISER, IS WANTED

Holland will insist on its international rights in refusing to surrender the Kaiser to the Allies for trial. Allied leaders are said to be more interested in obtaining reparation for wronged nations than in getting the scalp of the Kaiser.

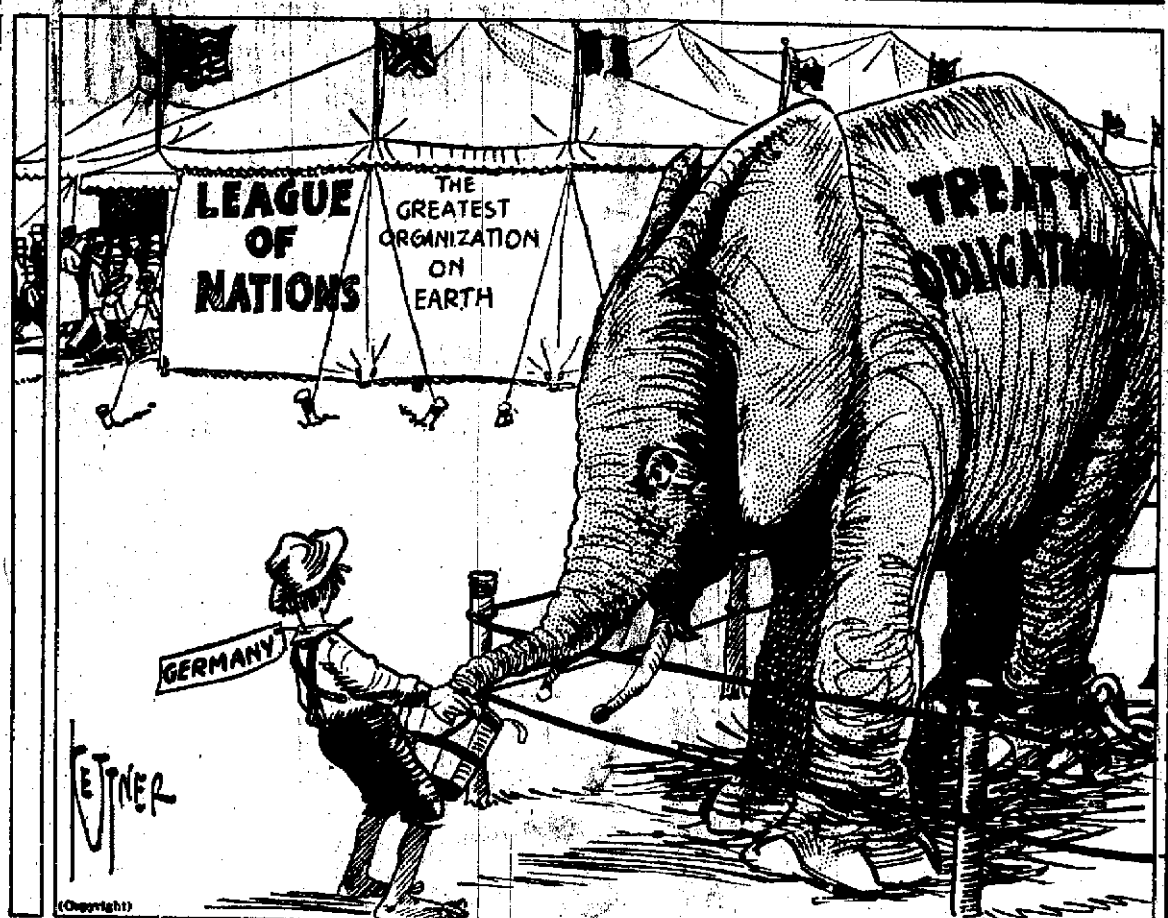

MEAT SUPPLY IN DANGER

WASHINGTON, July 11—The "big five" meat packers of the United States constitute a menace to the people according to the Federal Trade commission which made recommendations to President Wilson today that action be taken which will curb the monopolistic designs of Swift, Cudahy, Wilson, Armour and Morris.

BIRDMAN LEAVES PARK

Lieut. Murray, the birdman who was forced to land at the Park on the evening of July 4th, succeeded in getting his damaged plane repaired the only damage to the machine was to the landing carriage and when a bent axle had been straightened and new wheels supplied the engine was tuned up and everything found to be in good shape. The fence was taken down and the machine hauled back into the space in

Working His Way In

WILSON EXPLAINS
HIS POSITION ON
IRISH FREEDOM

WASHINGTON, July 10—President Wilson today expressed the wish that the American people should understand the "delicacy" of his position with reference to the Irish freedom. He stated this request to a group of Democratic senators who visited him at the capital after he had addressed the Senate.

The president told the senators that it was impossible for the proponents of Irish independence to obtain recognition at the peace conference. The situation as explained by the President is that the conference is concerned with territory taken from the enemy and possessed by the allies, whereas the Irish question relates to territory that is recognized by international law as belonging to Great Britain.

The senators were urged to carry this view of the matter to the people of the United States. At least one of them—Senator Phelan of California—accepted the President's view of the situation. After the conference Senator Phelan said: "I realize the delicacy of the situation as far as the President is concerned. Outside of obtaining England's consent to Ireland's autonomy nothing short of war with England can be done for Ireland. But none proposes war with England for the purpose of liberating Ireland. England has technically legal possession in Ireland and she denies the jurisdiction of the conference to disturb her title until she is ready to consider it."

MANY SHADE TREES DOWNED

A section of the hurricane which caused such havoc around Bradford and throughout the northern and western ends of the state generally, struck Clearfield with a roar about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A sixty mile an hour gust struck South Second and Front street along the river and blew down many shade trees along both streets. A big tent at the carnival grounds was in the path of the storm and was picked up and whirled about like a top and ripped to shreds. The ancient shade trees in front of the Bigler homestead and Y. M. C. A. also gave up a few of their legs and arms in the rush.

the center of the track and at 3:15 o'clock Lieut. Murray gave the signal, turned on the juice and away sped the Sopwith. She rolled rapidly over the ground for a few hundred feet when the pilot lifted her nose into the wind and skimmed gracefully over the town and away.

Lieut. Murray expected to land at the Government station near Bellefonte, replenish his stock of gas and oil and then continue his flight on to Mineola.

MANY HURT BY FLYING DEBRIS

BRADFORD, PA., July 10.—Two were killed, four seriously injured, and a dozen slightly injured; twenty-five houses were demolished, and fifty damaged, in a tornado which swept this section at 3:30 this afternoon.

The Dead

Mrs. Riddell, aged 60.
Child, unidentified.

The debris was carried for a quarter of a mile from Pine street to Rochester street. The property damage is not excessive, as most of the houses were of light construction.

Three killed, and more than a score injured at Bradford, and one killed and many injured at Derrick City, as well as houses torn up from their foundations and a general wave of destruction, was the result of a tornado which swept up the valley in which the city of Bradford is located yesterday afternoon.

Bradford at the present time is in ruins, with hundreds homeless as a result of the hurricane which swept over the valley at a few minutes before four yesterday afternoon. The first word of the disaster reached DuBois about six o'clock, and the Courier immediately put in a call for Bradford, only to be informed that all wires leading into the city were down, and no word could be obtained.

Information regarding the extent of the results of the tornado were obtained later, however, and revealed the fact that the storm, which was felt generally all over this section, centered in Bradford, and carried general ruin before it. Houses were torn off from their foundations and carried through the air, roofs were stripped off, trees were uprooted, telephone and telegraph poles and wires were all down, leaving Bradford a stricken city.

The main path of the tornado was from one end of the town to the other. Striking the city first at Maplewood avenue on the northern end, it traveled in a direct path across the city to High street, over the B. R. & P. tracks up Quinlan street, and out of the city.

Mr. Rothrock, trainman of No. 11 on the B. R. & P., which leaves Bradford at 5:10, in describing the effect of the storm, said, "The hurricane which struck Bradford, went through there about four o'clock."

"I understand that there were a number killed, but did not hear how many. It was all over when our train came in, but the general effects could easily be seen. Houses had been torn up and cast in a large field, three of four immense trees near the station had been uprooted, and the foot bridge across the river at the station was gone. We did not get in Bradford in time to see any more than the effects but we were talking to men at the station who described it as a whirlwind, which took everything in its path. You have possibly seen little whirlwinds of dust at times during the summer. Well, this was similar, only on a vastly larger scale. A freight train, going south, under the charge of Conductor Cunningham, was at Bradford at the time of the hurricane. It passed over the top of the train, but not injuring it in the least. Pieces of debris were carried over the top, however, and blown to the hill across the tracks.

Conductor Cunningham told me that while they were standing in the yards, they saw in the distance what appeared to be a parachute. It came on with the storm, and just about the time it reached the train, struck the ground, bouncing up three times, and then went over the train and out of sight. He also saw the bridge torn up. One three story house just south of the railroad was lifted off its foundations by the wind and cast to one side. Three or four big trees were torn up while the train was there."

The conductor of No. 11 stated to the DuBois Courier that three were killed, and possibly a score or more wounded. The names of the dead and the injured could not be learned, or account of the wires being down. Those injured are however at the present time being cared for in the Bradford hospital.

The storm struck Derrick City, which is three miles from Bradford, a few minutes before reaching Bradford. Here it left a similar wake of destruction of property, and took a toll of one life, and several badly injured.

Knights of Columbus of Central Pennsylvania are making extensive preparations for a pilgrimage to State College on Sunday August 10th, 1919. The purpose is to assist in the unveiling of a statue on the grounds of the Catholic chapel in honor of the Knights of Columbus. The chapel is a gem of architecture and was erected largely through the financial assistance of the Knights of Columbus and through the generosity of Major Boal of Boalsburg, Centre county. Major Boal and his son Captain Boal are devout Catholics and it will be recalled that Major Boal personally organized the first volunteer machine gun corps from Pennsylvania that landed in France. After a field mass is celebrated the Knights present will proceed by automobile to Boalsburg where luncheon will be served on the spacious lawn of the Boal mansion. The visitors will then be escorted through the Boal Museum which is the most complete private exhibition of war relics from the battlefields of France, in the United States. Automobile parties are being organized all over Pennsylvania among the Knights of Columbus and their friends for this pilgrimage. Each Council will receive later on a drafted letter from Father O'Hanlon of the State College chapel, giving more detailed information as to the program of the day.

which is three miles from Bradford, a few minutes before reaching Bradford. Here it left a similar wake of destruction of property, and took a toll of one life, and several badly injured.

Calls to Olean, Bradford, Salamanca and other cities in the neighborhood of the devastated regions, made by the Courier last night, brought only the word that the lines were all down. A call was also sent to Oil City, but no further particulars were learned there beyond these given.

Officer Jack Middleton, of the B. R. & P., was on a freight train that stopped at Bradford for water just as the tornado came hurtling over the city. He stated that in all of his experience as a resident of England, a soldier in the Boer War, or a member of the DuBois police force, he never saw anything like the scene unfolded as the tornado came sweeping along. The dark cloud kept spinning along, occasionally darting down to the ground accumulating an ever-increasing pile of refuse. Parts of dwellings, barns, sidewalks, etc., were soaring through the air and there was a constant roar. Mr. Middleton stated that he is of the opinion the tornado hurled the train he was on, as the train was directly in the path of the storm. There was no rain falling at the time that the great blow was in progress, but there was a constant play of lightning. In fact it seemed at times that the lightning remained for five minutes' duration.

PRESIDENT DASHES
LAST HOPE OF
LIQUOR INDUSTRY

WASHINGTON, July 10.—President Wilson today dashed the last hope of the "wet" as to the possible resumption of the sale of liquors, light wines and beer in this country prior to the time the constitutional amendment forbidding the manufacture and sale goes into effect on January 16 next.

The President indicated there was no possible chance for a speedy demobilization of the army to the point where he would feel justified in proclaiming demobilization completed. He further said that Attorney General Palmer was entirely right in ruling the President cannot proclaim peace with Germany until the treaty with that country is ratified by the Senate. Mr. Wilson smilingly said he did not know when that would be.

Before liquor or intoxicating wines and beers can be sold in this country it is necessary both to proclaim peace and declare demobilization completed. President Wilson, told callers today that the fact had been overlooked in this country that the peace treaty itself provides that Germany shall surrender certain war materials and equipment to the Allies in from one to four months after ratification of the treaty by the German assembly. The United States must participate in the military and naval committees which are to supervise this surrender of materials, and Mr. Wilson said the Allies had deemed it necessary to maintain a sufficient force in Europe to admit of no doubt that the German Government complies with the terms of the treaty in this respect.

Wilson Sees No Hope

The enforcement of the military and naval terms, the President said, was bound to slow up demobilization, and for this reason there seemed no hope that the ban on wartime prohibition will be lifted at any time.

ON SHIRKING

There is quite a tidy bit of literature concerning work in general and different kinds of work in particular.

There are also voluminous tons devoted to the philosophy of work, and at least one world religion upholds work as one of the ways to spiritual attainment.

This must have been gleaned in the search for something authoritative on the strenuous occupation of shirking.

Strange as it may seem, there is no bibliography of this considerably practised art.

workers and the shirkers. The workers are fairly well organized and tabulated but where can be found headquarters or headquarters of a union of shirkers?

Not in the I. W. W.'s for they make no pretense of working, while the shirkers do.

If there is a fraternal order of shirkers, it is a most secret one.

The shirker's slogan is: "Nothing is as pleasant as work," and they proceed to do—nothing, and at the same time to make as much about it as possible.

The working half of the world is always wondering how the shirking half of the world obtains its unearned repose by workless days.

"Be your own boss," is one of the most alluring phrases in the American language and it probably has an equivalent in English and other foreign tongues. In Boston they might say, "Be autonomously autocratic."

The shirker is most susceptible to the idea of being his own boss, for he feels instinctively that herein would lie his heaven. And it does—lie.

An idle heaven is the devil's delight.

As his own boss the shirker would forgive himself his past work-sins committed under coercion, and absolve himself from work forever.

With this in view innumerable shirkers have been lured into the temporary sacrifice of their principles to obtain that form of higher education which guarantees to the graduate bread, without the sweating of his brow.

Many other misguided shirkers have essayed correspondence courses but it is unrecorded that a single one ever completed a course, or the installment payments; or that one ever attained the degree of Master of Self.

They were dismayed to find that still more work is the only relief from the work in hand.

Yet the shirker is always the highest paid employe in any concern, that is, in proportion to his actual worth.

He is well represented in the percentage of overhead expense. The shirker never likes the work he is supposed to do.

He is forever quitting one position (never job) for another, and as often jumps from the frying pan into the fire. One thing shirked leads to another.

The only effective formula for emancipation from uncongenial work is to do it just as conscientiously and thoroughly as if it were the most congenial and interesting work imaginable.

The shirker is the slave of fate and set at a task that he hates. he is always overtaken and set at a task that he hates.

To love one's work, no matter how disagreeable is the purchase price of freedom from drudgery. A simulation of liking for a task will quickly beget a real interest in it and love for it.

The shirker is invariably a square peg in a round hole, and he spends his life in a fruitless search for a square hole to fit him.

The worker first adapts himself to any kind of a hole that falls to his lot and then forms the hole to please his fancy.

The shirker is of the opinion that if it is blessed to refrain from work one day in the week, it is a multiplication of blessedness to eliminate it as much as possible from the other six.

The shirker also opines that the commitment of Adam and Eve to work was in the nature of a punishment for their sins.

LAST CALL

It is a common thing to see some friend or acquaintance pass away unexpectedly, and before he is prepared.

Give him another week and he would make a will and get his house in order.

The last call came and it was too late for excuses.

Let the Clearfield Trust Co. help you get your affairs in shape so that you need not worry.

We would be glad to talk these matters over with you while you are in good health.

The Clearfield Trust Co.

while the worker views it as a compensation for the loss of paradise and he finds it a very close and satisfactory substitute.

The shirker is always so eager for the reward that he fails to earn it, while the worker so completely loses himself in the thought of accomplishment that the reward comes to him as a surprise and as a compensation over and above the personal satisfaction of having done the thing.

In his effort to get something for nothing the shirker works harder avoiding work than the worker does in doing it, but his results are always negative.

The shirker is a pessimist.
The worker is an optimist.

ODD AND INTERESTING

In the White House there are about 175 miles of electric wires providing for 3,000 incandescent lights, together with a call-bell system and a private telephone system for the use of the executive household.

If a theft takes place in a Japanese household all the servants are required to write a certain word with the same brush. The conscience is supposed to betray its workings in the waves of the ideographs written. Tracing an ideograph requires such an effort of muscular directness and undivided attention that this device often leads to the discovery of the guilty party.

The Y Emma's took another game from Woodland last night by the score of 5 to 4. R. Roseberry started the fifth inning with a single to left. G. P. DREW PASSES AWAY

Gilbert P. Drew died at his home on Second street at 11:30 o'clock last night, aged about 70 years. The deceased was born at Enfield, Maine, and came to Clearfield county with the Blanchard's more than fifty years ago to work in the lumber woods and was employed for many years by the late Joseph B. Walker. He was an experienced lumberman and when that industry passed he located in West Clearfield borough and has resided in this community for many years.

He was a sober, industrious, good citizen and had the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

He is survived by his widow, one son, Kress, of Butler, recently returned from overseas service with the A. E. F., and three daughters, viz: Mrs. Paul Kline, of Butler; Mrs. Miles Jordan, and Nellie, of Clearfield.

CLEARFIELD BOYS COMING HOME

Edward Leitzinger, Joe Smith and Ben F. Chase arrived on American soil yesterday after many months overseas service and will arrive home in Clearfield just as soon as they can be mustered out of the service.

Comrade Leitzinger was in the Twenty-third Engineers, Smith was in a regular army regiment while Chase was in the Marines.

THE BRADFORD SERVICES

The meeting at Bradford will continue tonight and tomorrow night. Rev. Strayer of Woodland preached last night from the subject, "Jesus the Refuge of the Soul." Rev. B. J. Hummel of Clearfield will preach tonight. Come and hear him.

THE TOWN COP

Sh-h-h! Don't wake the Cop! He's all tired out catching criminals. The town is asleep but it has nothing on the Cop. When the Cop sees this, will he not throw the Editor in the Booby Hatch? Nope, the Cop is a good natured Cuss and stands for lots. That's why everybody likes him.

In the heat of summer, owing to expansion, a steel bridge is appreciably longer than it is in winter, and at various times of the year it may be longer on one side than on the other, as when a hot sun plays on one flank, and a cold fog impinges on the other. The "breathing apparatus" of a bridge consists of rollers under the feet at one end so that the end can move to and fro freely according to the expansion and contraction of the huge girders.

BOLSHEVIKS TELL OF CZAR'S DEATH IN BRUTAL MANNER

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, July 11.—The Bolsheviks are naive and almost child-like in their explanation of the execution of the Czar and members of the royal family. Of the Czar's family the bolsheviks claim they do not know anything.

No effort is made to conceal the details of the Czar's death. The United Press correspondent asked one of the men high in the bolshevik foreign office for the truth about the Czar. His story was neither long nor complicated.

"The Czar was made prisoner by the bolsheviks at the overthrow of Kerensky and was taken to a small town in northwestern Siberia," said the bolshevik official. "He was kept there for some time, until an uprising occurred in the vicinity. His captors feared the reactionaries would take the Czar and declare him ruler again. So he was moved southward to a small hamlet in the Ural mountains. There he was kept until the Czech-Slovaks under Koltchak reached the proximity, and there was again danger of Nicholas being recaptured and declared Czar. The bolsheviks guarding him realized this danger.

"So one night they executed him. They did it entirely without our knowledge and against our orders. The only authority they had was that of the local soviet. We learned of the execution some days after it was done.

"The local soviet sent in the orders for execution, and asked us to approve them. Since the Czar was already executed, we decided that we might as well approve of the local soviet's action, so we did, and the Czar's execution was given the O. K. of the national soviet congress."

The Moscow bolsheviks claim they have no information regarding the fate of the Czarina and the children of the Czar, all of whom were taken prisoners with Nicholas. They probably, were kept with him, and were executed at the same time, admit the bolsheviks.

The bolsheviks claim that the local soviet acted as a court to try the Czar before its members declared themselves for his execution. His death is justified on the grounds that he was a danger to bolshevism and would always be an influence to reaction.

Some of the details of the Czar's death came to light when two Russians who were present at the death scene in the Urals appeared in Berlin and told part of their stories to members of the Allied missions there.

These Russians who had escaped from the bolsheviks, had in their possession small bits of cloth, which they claimed were remnants from the clothes of the former Russian royalty. The soldiers claimed to have seen the executions, not only of Nicholas, but of his wife and children. They said it was cruel and brutal beyond description.

Grand Duke Nicholas is thought by the bolsheviks to be living in the Crimea. The bolsheviks regard him as a dangerous personality, and would like to bring him before a soviet tribunal.

Executions and imprisonments in soviet Russia have done much to rid that country of political leaders dangerous to the bolsheviks. The bolsheviks have shown rare diligence and judgment in seizing the men likely to be dangerous.

According to the bolsheviks, the executions in Russia have not reached the figures given out by their enemies. The bolsheviks testify to the statement that not more than five thousand people have been actually killed in the revolution.

However, most of these were executions. The bolsheviks claim that every one executed had a trial before a tribunal. The tribunal consisted of three communists. The system of trial by tribunals is still in practice.

Most of the executions were during the Red Terror, according to the Moscow leaders. They justify the Red Terror, on the grounds that it was the only means of bringing peace in the land, when counter plots were threatening Lenin and other bolshevik leaders.

Only recently have any of these political refugees been allowed out of prison. They are still closely watched. In Petrograd the United Press correspondent had dinner one evening with a baron who had just been released.

An Old Recipe To Darken Hair

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

EDUCATION PLAN OF BOLSHIEVKS IN PETROGRAD

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, July 12—More people in Soviet Russia are learning to read than are learning to write. The bolsheviks want people to know how to read in order to facilitate the spread of the "communist gospel." A wide-spread definite system of education is being put into effect, not only for youngsters but also for the elders. The bolsheviks have established schools that are a wide departure from anything known in Russia heretofore. Many features are not radically different from elementary American schools, which the Russians are copying.

The first feature to go by the board in Russia was religion. Schools were formerly conducted by priests and the curriculum was two-thirds religion and one-third education. This order is reversed now. The bolsheviks are teaching two-thirds socialism and communism and one-third education, the latter being mostly reading and writing. Since many of the children in the cities were starving, the bolshevik government in Moscow and Petrograd is serving a noon meal to the children in school. In many schools clothes are being issued to children whose parents cannot supply them.

The education program considered by bolshevik leaders to be far in advance of anything in vogue today practically takes the raising and educating of children out of the hands of the family and places children in the charge of the state. The Russian code of labor requires that everyone work, women as well as men, except that women have eight weeks before and eight weeks after the birth of a child during which they may stay at home.

At all other times, the mother must leave her babies at public nurseries where the state will take charge of them and educate them. Already, some of these nurseries have been established, and the bolshevik government anticipates bringing up the next generation according to certain "proper" theories.

The bolsheviks are working out their educational system in the cities, and thus far have done nothing for the children of the country. They plan to extend their system to the rural districts later. The peasants have been slower to accept the benevolences of paternal bolsheviks.

In developing their educational system the bolsheviks face a tremendous problem, due to the enormous percent age of illiteracy in Russia. Systems of adult night schools have been started in the cities for the grown-ups who do not know how to read and write, or who want to take up special studies. The universities have been opened to everyone free of charge, and for the most part are attended by older people. The normal student body is mobilized at the front. Lectures and meetings are the most popular form of education at present. There are meetings by the thousands everywhere. In Soviet Russia there is little else to do but go to a meeting in the evening, aside from a limited number of theatres.

Cafes, to which the Russians used to flock are closed by order of the soviet government. Restaurants and all other gathering places likewise are no more. In place of these European institutions the bolsheviks offer specially arranged meetings, at which are served lectures on socialism, communism and world-revolution.

The state has on its pay-rolls a staff of speakers, many of whom were formerly street agitators in America and England who are engaged as educators of the people. To attract people to these meetings the most noted singers, musicians and dancers give performances after the lectures. The press and the theatre is used to spread bolshevik education. Public places and clubs have been confiscated for the meeting places. In Moscow the nobels' club has been turned into a labor temple and is the principal meeting place. The public has opportunity to attend the theatre and opera on a partly communistic and partly capitalistic basis. All theatres are confiscated by the state, and their former owners are gone. For the most part the stage stars remain the same, monthly bonuses up to three thousand rubles per month being paid them to encourage them to continue the roles.

The opera and ballet in Moscow is as well staged as ever and is beautiful beyond comparison with war time presentations in other capitals of Europe. The audience is the most interesting development. Amongst splendidly dressed people and beautiful women, obviously of the former bourgeoisie classes people who have been able to make their money last through the revolution, one sees unwashed, unshaved, rough workmen dressed in dirty work clothes. They are recipients of tickets distributed free or charge by the government among factory workers and government employees. These sit without removing their caps apparently enjoying the theatre for the first time in their lives.

Ordinary people must buy tickets—only the privileged workman or government employee is a guest—at the box or from scalpers the same as in capitalistic lands.

AMERICA'S IMMORTALS

FRANK GAFFNEY,
Private, First Class, Company
G, 102nd Infantry.

Private Gaffney earned his Distinguished Service Cross by conspicuous gallantry in action near Roncesvalles, France, September 29, 1918. Private Gaffney, an automatic rifleman, pushed forward alone with his gun, after all the other members of his squad had been killed, discovered several Germans placing a heavy machine gun in position. He killed the crew, captured the gun, bombed several dugouts and, after killing four more of the enemy with his pistol, held the position until reinforcements came up, when eight prisoners were captured. His home is in Lockport, N. Y., and his father is Wilber Gaffney, Chapin street.

Put Stomach In Fine Condition

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by hyperacidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten scours in the stomach much like garbage scours in a can, forming acid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescent and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

Five Million Europeans Have Their Eyes Fixed on America for Homes

By F. C. HOWE, New York Immigration Commissioner

Five million Europeans, wearied by the war but still awakened to new points of view by it, are turning their eyes and thoughts to new homes across the sea.

If they can find these homes in the United States they will flock here the moment the opportunity is afforded. Otherwise they will remain where they are. Canada, Australia or South America are not considered for an instant by the great majority.

France has her thousands ready to come. Italy has even more, and England will be largely represented when a propitious time has come. But it is Germany that has the most numerous and most eager company of those who would be emigrants to this country.

The American doughboy is responsible for the new and fervent consideration Europeans are giving the United States. With his head up, a grin on his tanned face and his long legs swinging in a stride that seems never to tire, the American doughboy is altogether the most lovable, the most worth while man in Europe. He does things that nobody else has been able to do; he goes to places that everybody else thinks cannot possibly be reached. There isn't a corner in Europe that the man in khaki hasn't looked into; there isn't a job that he hasn't tackled and completed. The European peoples love the things, the opportunities of the United States, whence came the American doughboy, their new idol.

It is curious that no other land in the world seems to promise them what they are sure they will find here. Not Canada, nor Australia; nor the Argentine or any other country of South America. Politically or by tradition these lands are too closely bound to Europe, and they want no more of the old Europe.

BUNDLES.

Is a baby a bundle? The question is more important than it sounds, for upon the answer rests the right of officers of the United States army to carry their own offspring (singular or plural). Officers must not carry bundles. It is against the customs of the service. It is taboo in the army, says New Republic. It might be considered as a flagrant breach of those rules and manners that have grown up in the old regular establishment for the purpose of hedging about that sacred entity, the officer and gentlemen, with restrictions that would in any way offend against the dignity of his position. Now, is a baby a bundle? You see at once the deep significance of the question. If a baby is a bundle, the officer-father must not carry him. If not a bundle, he may avail himself of this privilege of parenthood and march down the street with his first born, proud in the consciousness that he is fulfilling his parental obligation on the one hand and, on the other, that he is not permitting his dignity to be compromised or causing his self-respect to take a slump.

It is suggested that the former kaiser be interned on the island of Molokai, the Hawaiian leper colony. But why add to the sufferings of those unfortunate?

U. S. TO RESUME TRADE RELATIONS WITH GERMANY AT ONCE

SENATORS SAY U. S. WILL LOSE HER INDEPENDENCEPOINT OUT RESULT OF APPLICATION OF PRINCIPLE LAID DOWN IN SPEECH
MADE YESTERDAY

"AT WHATEVER COST OF INDEPENDENT ACTION"

By L. C. MARTIN

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C. July 11—Senators opposing the League of Nations are today making much capital out of just six words uttered when the president addressed the Senate yesterday. They cite these six words as proof of their contention that the United States will stand committed to being robbed of its right to independence of action. The words are "at whatever cost of independent action." The President used these words in declaring that the world demanded a new order of international politics to obtain freedom and justice. Anti-leaguers believe that the President meant the term literally and that a literal interpretation of the words commits the U. S. to a policy, under the league, of an absolute surrender of independent action in world affairs.

MARCH ON THE CARPET

WASHINGTON, July 11—General March, Chief of Staff of the United States Army was today summoned before the Special House Committee investigating the food supply. He will be asked to explain why there was a six months delay in disposing of the surplus army food for which the government had no use and which would have materially affected living costs throughout the nation had it been put on the market.

DIRIGIBLE R-34 HALF WAY HOME

NEW YORK, July 11—Bowling along at a speed of sixty knots the British blimp R-34 is believed today to be more than half way across the Atlantic on her home journey to Scotland. The latest wireless received was as follows: "Speeding sixty knots to blighty. All is well."

LONDON, July 11—The Air Ministry announced today that the R-34 has wireless her position which shows that she is 1500 miles out from New York. She added that her supply of fuel was half consumed.

JAP AMBASSADOR ISHII RETIRES

TOKIO, JAPAN, July 3d. (Delayed)—Resignation of Aikuro Ishii as Ambassador to the United States and his retirement from public life has been announced. Ill health was given as the sole reason for the resignation. So far as is known no successor has been named.

REPARATION, NOT KAISER, IS WANTED

Holland will insist on its international rights in refusing to surrender the Kaiser to the Allies for trial. Allied leaders are said to be more interested in obtaining reparation for wronged nations than in getting the scalp of the Kaiser.

MEAT SUPPLY IN DANGER

WASHINGTON, July 11—The "big five" meat packers of the United States constitute a menace to the people according to the Federal Trade commission which made recommendations to President Wilson today that action be taken which will curb the monopolistic designs of Swift, Cudahy, Wilson, Armour and Morris.

BIRDMAN LEAVES PARK

Lieut. Murray, the birdman who was forced to land at the Park on the evening of July 4th, succeeded in getting his damaged plane repaired the only damage to the machine was to the landing carriage and when a bent axle had been straightened and new wheels supplied the engine was tuned up and everything found to be in good shape. The fence was taken down and the machine hauled back into the space in

Working His Way In

WILSON EXPLAINS
HIS POSITION ON
IRISH FREEDOM

WASHINGTON, July 10—President Wilson today expressed the wish that the American people should understand the "delicacy" of his position with reference to the Irish freedom. He stated this request to a group of Democratic senators who visited him at the capital after he had addressed the Senate.

The president told the senators that it was impossible for the proponents of Irish independence to obtain recognition at the peace conference. The situation as explained by the President is that the conference is concerned with territory taken from the enemy and possessed by the allies, whereas the Irish question relates to territory that is recognized by international law as belonging to Great Britain.

The senators were urged to carry this view of the matter to the people of the United States. At least one of them—Senator Phelan of California—accepted the President's view of the situation. After the conference Senator Phelan said: "I realize the delicacy of the situation as far as the President is concerned. Outside of obtaining England's consent to Ireland's autonomy nothing short of war with England can be done for Ireland. But none proposes war with England for the purpose of liberating Ireland. England has technically legal possession in Ireland and she denies the jurisdiction of the conference to disturb her title until she is ready to consider it."

MANY SHADE TREES DOWNED

A section of the hurricane which caused such havoc around Bradford and throughout the northern and western ends of the state generally, struck Clearfield with a roar about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A sixty mile an hour gust struck South Second and Front street along the river and blew down many shade trees along both streets. A big tent at the carnival grounds was in the path of the storm and was picked up and whirled about like a top and ripped to shreds. The ancient shade trees in front of the Bigler homestead and Y. M. C. A. also gave up a few of their legs and arms in the rush.

the center of the track and at 3:15 o'clock Lieut. Murray gave the signal, turned on the juice and away sped the Sopwith. She rolled rapidly over the ground for a few hundred feet when the pilot lifted her nose into the wind and skimmed gracefully over the town and away.

Lieut. Murray expected to land at the Government station near Bellefonte, replenish his stock of gas and oil and then continue his flight on to Mineola.

THREE KILLED

MANY HURT BY FLYING DEBRIS

BRADFORD, PA., July 10.—Two were killed, four seriously injured, and a dozen slightly injured; twenty-five houses were demolished, and fifty damaged, in a tornado which swept this section at 3:30 this afternoon.

The Dead
Mrs. Riddell, aged 60.
Child, unidentified.

The debris was carried for a quarter of a mile from Pine street to Rochester street. The property damage is not excessive, as most of the houses were of light construction.

Three killed, and more than a score injured at Bradford, and one killed and many injured at Derrick City, as well as houses torn up from their foundations and a general wave of destruction, was the result of a tornado which swept up the valley in which the city of Bradford is located yesterday afternoon.

Bradford at the present time is in ruins, with hundreds homeless as a result of the hurricane which swept over the valley at a few minutes before four yesterday afternoon. The first word of the disaster reached DuBois about six o'clock, and the Courier immediately put in a call for Bradford, only to be informed that all wires leading into the city were down, and no word could be obtained.

Information regarding the extent of the results of the tornado were obtained later, however, and revealed the fact that the storm, which was felt generally all over this section, centered in Bradford, and carried general ruin before it. Houses were torn off from their foundations and carried through the air, roofs were stripped off, trees were uprooted, telephone and telegraph poles and wires were all down, leaving Bradford a stricken city.

The main path of the tornado was from one end of the town to the other. Striking the city first at Maplewood avenue on the northern end, it traveled in a direct path across the city to High street, over the B. R. & P. tracks up Quinlan street, and out of the city.

Mr. Rothrock, trainman of No. 11 on the B. R. & P., which leaves Bradford at 5:10, in describing the effect of the storm, said, "The hurricane which struck Bradford, went through there about four o'clock."

"I understand that there were a number killed, but did not hear how many. It was all over when our train came in, but the general effects could easily be seen. Houses had been torn up and cast in a large field, three of four immense trees near the station had been uprooted, and the foot bridge across the river at the station was gone. We did not get in Bradford in time to see any more than the effects but we were talking to men at the station who described it as a whirlwind, which took everything in its path. You have possibly seen little whirlwinds of dust at times during the summer. Well, this was similar, only on a vastly larger scale. A freight train, going south, under the charge of Conductor Cunningham, was at Bradford at the time of the hurricane. It passed over the top of the train, but not injuring it in the least. Pieces of debris were carried over the top, however, and blown to the hill across the tracks.

Conductor Cunningham told me that while they were standing in the yards, they saw in the distance what appeared to be a parachute. It came on with the storm, and just about the time it reached the train, struck the ground, bouncing up three times, and then went over the train and out of sight. He also saw the bridge torn up. One three story house just south of the railroad was lifted off its foundations by the wind and cast to one side. Three or four big trees were torn up while the train was there."

The conductor of No. 11 stated to the DuBois Courier that three were killed, and possibly a score or more wounded. The names of the dead and the injured could not be learned, or account of the wires being down. Those injured are however at the present time being cared for in the Bradford hospital.

MAXIMILIAN HARDEN LIKELY FIRST
AMBASSADOR TO THE UNITED STATES

By CARL D. GROAT

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, July 9—Delayed—Maximilian Harden, editor of "Die Zukunft" and opponent of German autocracy has been widely discussed for the post of Ambassador to the United States. Count von Bernstorff is said to look with favor on Harden's qualification for the post, believing that his liberal views and editorial work will commend him to the American people and bring about that quick renewal of friendly relations which is so much desired and needed by the new German nation.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS
PILGRIMAGE TO STATE COLLEGE

The Knights of Columbus of Central Pennsylvania are making extensive preparations for a pilgrimage to State College on Sunday August 10th, 1919. The purpose is to assist in the unveiling of a statue on the grounds of the Catholic chapel in honor of the Knights of Columbus. The chapel is a gem of architecture and was erected largely through the financial assistance of the Knights of Columbus and through the generosity of Major Boal of Boalsburg, Centre county. Major Boal and his son Captain Boal are devout Catholics and it will be recalled that Major Boal personally organized the first volunteer machine gun corps from Pennsylvania that landed in France. After a field mass is celebrated the Knights present will proceed by automobile to Boalsburg where luncheon will be served on the spacious lawn of the Boal mansion. The visitors will then be escorted through the Boal Museum which is the most complete private exhibition of war relics from the battlefields of France, in the United States. Automobile parties are being organized all over Pennsylvania among the Knights of Columbus and their friends for this pilgrimage. Each Council will receive later on a drafted letter from Father O'Hanlon of the State College chapel, giving more detailed information as to the program of the day.

which is three miles from Bradford, a few minutes before reaching Bradford. Here it left a similar wake of destruction of property, and took a toll of one life, and several badly injured.

Calls to Olean, Bradford, Salamanca and other cities in the neighborhood of the devastated regions, made by the Courier last night, brought only the word that the lines were all down. A call was also sent to Oil City, but no further particulars were learned there beyond these given.

Officer Jack Middleton, of the B. R. & P., was on a freight train that stopped at Bradford for water just as the tornado came hurtling over the city. He stated that in all of his experience as a resident of England, a soldier in the Boer War, or a member of the DuBois police force, he never saw anything like the scene unfolded as the tornado came sweeping along. The dark cloud kept spinning along, occasionally darting down to the ground accumulating an ever-increasing pile of refuse. Parts of dwellings, barns, sidewalks, etc., were soaring through the air and there was a constant roar. Mr. Middleton stated that he is of the opinion the tornado hurled the train he was on, as the train was directly in the path of the storm. There was no rain falling at the time that the great blow was in progress, but there was a constant play of lightning. In fact it seemed at times that the lightning remained for five minutes' duration.

PRESIDENT DASHES
LAST HOPE OF
LIQUOR INDUSTRY

WASHINGTON, July 10.—President Wilson today dashed the last hope of the "wet" as to the possible resumption of the sale of liquors, light wines and beer in this country prior to the time the constitutional amendment forbidding the manufacture and sale goes into effect on January 16 next.

The President indicated there was no possible chance for a speedy demobilization of the army to the point where he would feel justified in proclaiming demobilization completed. He further said that Attorney General Palmer was entirely right in ruling the President cannot proclaim peace with Germany until the treaty with that country is ratified by the Senate. Mr. Wilson smilingly said he did not know when that would be.

Before liquor or intoxicating wines and beers can be sold in this country it is necessary both to proclaim peace and declare demobilization completed. President Wilson, told callers today that the fact had been overlooked in this country that the peace treaty itself provides that Germany shall surrender certain war materials and equipment to the Allies in from one to four months after ratification of the treaty by the German assembly. The United States must participate in the military and naval committees which are to supervise this surrender of materials, and Mr. Wilson said the Allies had deemed it necessary to maintain a sufficient force in Europe to admit of no doubt that the German Government complies with the terms of the treaty in this respect.

Wilson Sees No Hope

The enforcement of the military and naval terms, the President said, was bound to slow up demobilization, and for this reason there seemed no hope that the ban on wartime prohibition will be lifted at any time.

ON SHIRKING

There is quite a tidy bit of literature concerning work in general and different kinds of work in particular.

There are also voluminous tons devoted to the philosophy of work, and at least one world religion upholds work as one of the ways to spiritual attainment.

This must have been gleaned in the search for something authoritative on the strenuous occupation of shirking.

Strange as it may seem, there is no bibliography of this considerably practised art.

workers and the shirkers. The workers are fairly well organized and tabulated but where can be found headquarters or headquarters of a union of shirkers?

Not in the I. W. W.'s for they make no pretense of working, while the shirkers do.

If there is a fraternal order of shirkers, it is a most secret one.

The shirker's slogan is: "Nothing is as pleasant as work," and they proceed to do—nothing, and at the same time to make as much about it as possible.

The working half of the world is always wondering how the shirking half of the world obtains its unearned repose by workless days.

"Be your own boss," is one of the most alluring phrases in the American language and it probably has an equivalent in English and other foreign tongues. In Boston they might say, "Be autonomously autocratic."

The shirker is most susceptible to the idea of being his own boss, for he feels instinctively that herein would lie his heaven. And it does—lie.

An idle heaven is the devil's delight. As his own boss the shirker would forgive himself his past work-sins committed under coercion, and absolve himself from work forever.

With this in view innumerable shirkers have been lured into the temporary sacrifice of their principles to obtain that form of higher education which guarantees to the graduate bread, without the sweating of his brow.

Many other misguided shirkers have essayed correspondence courses but it is unrecorded that a single one ever completed a course, or the installment payments; or that one ever attained the degree of Master of Self.

They were dismayed to find that still more work is the only relief from the work in hand.

Yet the shirker is always the highest paid employe in any concern, that is, in proportion to his actual worth.

He is well represented in the percentage of overhead expense.

The shirker never likes the work he is supposed to do.

He is forever quitting one position (never job) for another, and as often jumps from the frying pan into the fire. One thing shirked leads to another.

The only effective formula for emancipation from uncongenial work is to do it just as conscientiously and thoroughly as if it were the most congenial and interesting work imaginable.

The shirker is the slave of fate and set at a task that he hates. He is always overtaken and set at a task that he hates.

To love one's work, no matter how disagreeable is the purchase price of freedom from drudgery. A simulation of liking for a task will quickly beget a real interest in it and love for it.

The shirker is invariably a square peg in a round hole, and he spends his life in a fruitless search for a square hole to fit him.

The worker first adapts himself to any kind of a hole that falls to his lot and then forms the hole to please his fancy.

The shirker is of the opinion that if it is blessed to refrain from work one day in the week, it is a multiplication of blessedness to eliminate it as much as possible from the other six.

The shirker also opines that the commitment of Adam and Eve to work was in the nature of a punishment for their sins.

LAST CALL

It is a common thing to see some friend or acquaintance pass away unexpectedly, and before he is prepared.

Give him another week and he would make a will and get his house in order.

The last call came and it was too late for excuses.

Let the Clearfield Trust Co. help you get your affairs in shape so that you need not worry.

We would be glad to talk these matters over with you while you are in good health.

The Clearfield Trust Co.

while the worker views it as a compensation for the loss of paradise and he finds it a very close and satisfactory substitute.

The shirker is always so eager for the reward that he fails to earn it, while the worker so completely loses himself in the thought of accomplishment that the reward comes to him as a surprise and as a compensation over and above the personal satisfaction of having done the thing.

In his effort to get something for nothing the shirker works harder avoiding work than the worker does in doing it, but his results are always negative.

The shirker is a pessimist. The worker is an optimist.

In the White House there are about 175 miles of electric wires providing for 3,000 incandescent lights, together with a call-bell system and a private telephone system for the use of the executive household.

If a theft takes place in a Japanese household all the servants are required to write a certain word with the same brush. The conscience is supposed to betray its workings in the waves of the ideographs written. Tracing an ideograph requires such an effort of muscular directness and undivided attention that this device often leads to the discovery of the guilty party.

CAN BEAT WOODLAND ANYHOW

The Y Emma's took another game from Woodland last night by the score of 5 to 4. R. Roseberry started the fifth inning with a single to left.

Lytle tried to sacrifice and beat out his bunt to third, both men being safe. Both men advanced on a passed ball and R. Roseberry scored on H. Roseberry's single to right. Lytle scored a moment later on a passed ball.

Woodland got all of its runs in the first two innings. They got two in the first and two in the second. After the second inning they only got one man past first base.

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Apply few drops then lift sore, touchy corns off with fingers

With your fingers! You can lift off any hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the hard skin calluses from bottom of feet.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs little at any drug store; apply a few drops upon the corn or callus. Instantly it stops hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callus right off, root and all, without one bit of pain or soreness. Truly! No humbug!

G. P. DREW PASSES AWAY

Gilbert P. Drew died at his home on Second street at 11:30 o'clock last night, aged about 70 years. The deceased was born at Enfield, Maine, and came to Clearfield county with the Blanchard's more than fifty years ago to work in the lumber woods and was employed for many years by the late Joseph B. Walker. He was an experienced lumberman and when that industry passed he located in West Clearfield borough and has resided in this community for many years.

He was a sober, industrious, good citizen and had the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

He is survived by his widow, one son, Kress, of Butler, recently returned from overseas service with the A. E. F., and three daughters, viz: Mrs. Paul Kline, of Butler; Mrs. Miles Jordan, and Nellie, of Clearfield.

CLEARFIELD BOYS COMING HOME

Edward Leitzinger, Joe Smith and Ben F. Chase arrived on American soil yesterday after many months' overseas service and will arrive home in Clearfield just as soon as they can be mustered out of the service.

Comrade Leitzinger was in the Twenty-third Engineers, Smith was in a regular army regiment while Chase was in the Marines.

In the heat of summer, owing to expansion, a steel bridge is appreciably longer than it is in winter, and at various times of the year it may be longer on one side than on the other, as when a hot sun plays on one flank, and a cold fog impinges on the other. The "breathing apparatus" of a bridge consists of rollers under the feet at one end so that the end can move to and fro freely according to the expansion and contraction of the huge girders.

BOLSHEVIKS TELL OF CZAR'S DEATH IN BRUTAL MANNER

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, July 11.—The Bolsheviks are naive and almost child-like in their explanation of the execution of the Czar and members of the royal family. Of the Czar's family the bolsheviks claim they do not know anything.

No effort is made to conceal the details of the Czar's death. The United Press correspondent asked one of the men high in the bolshevik foreign office for the truth about the Czar. His story was neither long nor complicated.

"The Czar was made prisoner by the bolsheviks at the overthrow of Kerensky and was taken to a small town in northwestern Siberia," said the bolshevik official. "He was kept there for some time, until an uprising occurred in the vicinity. His captors feared the reactionaries would take the Czar and declare him ruler again. So he was moved southward to a small hamlet in the Ural mountains. There he was kept until the Czech-Slovaks under Koltchak reached the proximity, and there was again danger of Nicholas being recaptured and declared Czar. The bolsheviks guarding him realized this danger.

"So one night they executed him. They did it entirely without our knowledge and against our orders. The only authority they had was that of the local soviet. We learned of the execution some days after it was done.

"The local soviet sent in the orders for execution, and asked us to approve them. Since the Czar was already executed, we decided that we might as well approve of the local soviet's action, so we did, and the Czar's execution was given the O. K. of the national soviet congress."

The Moscow bolsheviks claim they have no information regarding the fate of the Czarina and the children of the Czar, all of whom were taken prisoners with Nicholas. They probably, were kept with him, and were executed at the same time, admit the bolsheviks.

The bolsheviks claim that the local soviet acted as a court to try the Czar before its members declared themselves for his execution. His death is justified on the grounds that he was a danger to bolshevism and would always be an influence to reaction.

Some of the details of the Czar's death came to light when two Russians who were present at the death scene in the Urals appeared in Berlin and told part of their stories to members of the Allied missions there.

These Russians who had escaped from the bolsheviks, had in their possession small bits of cloth, which they claimed were remnants from the clothes of the former Russian royalty. The soldiers claimed to have seen the executions, not only of Nicholas, but of his wife and children. They said it was cruel and brutal beyond description.

Grand Duke Nicholas is thought by the bolsheviks to be living in the Crimea. The bolsheviks regard him as a dangerous personality, and would like to bring him before a soviet tribunal. Executions and imprisonments in soviet Russia have done much to rid that country of political leaders dangerous to the bolsheviks. The bolsheviks have shown rare diligence and judgment in seizing the men likely to be dangerous.

According to the bolsheviks, the executions in Russia have not reached the figures given out by their enemies. The bolsheviks testify to the statement that not more than five thousand people have been actually killed in the revolution.

However, most of these were executions. The bolsheviks claim that every one executed had a trial before a tribunal. The tribunal consisted of three communists. The system of trial by tribunals is still in practice. Most of the executions were during the Red Terror, according to the Moscow leaders. They justify the Red Terror, on the grounds that it was the only means of bringing peace in the land, when counter plots were threatening Lenin and other bolshevik leaders.

The Red Terror put the fear of disorder in the hearts of the Russian people. It was the means by which the bolsheviks seized a strangle hold on the country. It also enabled them to either jail or execute every political opponent of any importance inside Russia.

Only recently have any of these political refugees been allowed out of prison. They are still closely watched. In Petrograd the United Press correspondent had dinner one evening with a baron who had just been released.

An Old Recipe To Darken Hair

Sage, Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

WOMEN TO HAVE PROMINENT PART IN LOYAL LEGION

Women will have a direct interest and active participation in The American Legion, the national organization of American veterans of the Great War. Not only will local Posts of women who are entitled to full membership in the Legion by reason of their enlistment in the service be formed but also women auxiliaries will be organized by women who are interested in the Legion and who desire to co-operate with ex-service men in founding local Posts.

In response to inquiries from many States, where women who organized during the war to help their relatives and friends in the service and the families of these men, desire to continue their interest in the returned veterans, the National Executive Committee announces its approval of the organization of women auxiliaries of individual posts. States branches of the Legion will be notified to encourage the formation of these auxiliaries which it is believed will assist materially in completing the organization of the veterans themselves.

The purpose of this action is to enable these auxiliary agencies which were recognized as distinct assets to the morale of the army, navy and marine corps during the war to continue and preserve their service and usefulness in the civilian activities of the war's veterans. The permanent status of women's auxiliaries of local Posts will be determined by the national convention of The American Legion at Minneapolis in November.

The organization of women who were actually enlisted in the United States service will be conducted by the state branches. Yeomanette posts have already been chartered and others that have applied for charters will receive them in a few days. Among those now under way are the Edith Cavell Post in Brooklyn, composed of yeomanettes who served in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, the Betty Ross Post in Washington, D. C., Bothwell Kane Post at Fort Worth, Texas, Marina Washington and Molly Pitcher Posts on the Pacific Coast and the Barbara Freethill Post in New York.

MODERN BARN FOR THE SMALL DAIRY

Building to House 18 Cows and Feed Supply Is Described.

GOOD PROFIT IN MILK HERD

Up-to-Date Housing and Silo Are Positive Necessity—They Keep High-Priced Animals Healthy, Save Labor and Conserve Food.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF CHARGE on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 127 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose three-cent stamp for reply.

Housing the dairy herd in the winter so that the cows will be most productive and most profitable is not much of a problem for the modern dairyman. The present-day methods of designing and constructing dairy barns have been brought to a science by farm building architects and the comfort has made a study of the best method of housing his stock and of caring for the animals.

The feed alley is equipped with an overhead carrier system that leads from the silo and feed rooms to each stall. The ensilage and grain are placed in the carrier and taken to each manger, which, it readily will be seen, eliminates many steps and much time. Carriers are over each litter alley and lead to the manure pit or pile on either side of the silo at the rear of the barn. Here again the work is done easily and with a minimum expenditure of time.

Tanks Do Not Freeze.

The stall floors as well as the stable floor are constructed of concrete. At the rear of each row of stalls is a gutter, with a drain at one end. It is the work of but a few minutes to flush these gutters after the manure has been removed. The indoor water tanks will not freeze in the winter and water always is available for the stock. With a small additional expense the water can be piped to individual drinking cups at each stall.

Sunshine and fresh air are two of the things that keep the cows healthy and productive. The windows in this barn permit the sunshine to fall on the litter alleys and gutters. Sunshine kills germs and keeps the barn air wholesome. The windows also admit plenty of fresh air, the foul air being drawn out of the stable through the shafts and out of the ventilators on the roof. Just a word about the silo. One-third of the feed value of corn is in and health of the animals, two things necessary if they are to be profitable, are provided for.

Keeping a dairy herd is one of the most profitable parts of the farming business. Not only are the cows revenue producers, but they supply the farm owner with fertilizer that is necessary to keep the soil at its best. For these reasons the farmers who keep good-sized herds of cows are increasing in numbers every year.

Seven months in the year in the corn belt the cows are fed and housed in a barn. And to feed them and water them and milk them and do the other work that is necessary requires a considerable amount of time. At the present price of farm labor, time really is money and the modern barn is designed and equipped so that all this work can be done with the least amount of effort.

Barns of Several Types. Dairy barns are of several types, but the farm owner with a herd of eight or ten cows wants a building that can be constructed economically and will be weather-proof and arranged conveniently. Such a barn is shown in the accompanying design. This stalk. Consequently one-third of the productive value of each acre planted to corn is conserved when the stalks are chopped and stored in the silo. This is the only fresh feed that can be provided for cows in the winter, and there is not only a saving in money, but the cows feed on ensilage produce a larger amount of milk, that is heavier in butterfat.

Positive Necessities.

A modern barn and silo are positive necessities in modern dairy farming. They keep high-priced animals healthy and productive, save labor, and conserve feed, which at its present price is good business.

In planning a dairy barn, or general purpose-barn, it is always well to consult the local architect, builder and material dealer before deciding on the design. These men know how a barn should be built to supply the needs of the individual. They also can tell what such a building will cost, and will help finance the building should it be necessary.

Dairy products are high in price now, just as fire other farm products. And they will continue so for some years to come, according to those who are in barn is planned for a herd of 20 cows, their calves and one bull, with storage room for the feed supply.

The dimensions of the building are 36 by 60 feet. It is of standard plank frame construction, set on a concrete foundation. The gambrel-trussed roof, which eliminates all posts in the hayloft, permits the storage of a maximum amount of roughage, while the silo at one end provides the animals with fresh feed all winter.

There are many interesting features that make this a modern, efficient barn—shown in the floor plan of the dairy stable that accompanies this article. Through the center of the barn there is a driveway, 6 feet 6 inches wide, while on either side are litter alleys, 5 feet 2 inches wide.

Arrangement of Stalls. The single cow stalls are ranged along the driveway, which also is used as the feed alley. Single stalls facing the feed alley provide for 16 cows, eight on each side. At the front of the building are two stalls, a bull pen and a pen for the calves. At the rear of the building are feed rooms and the entrance to the silo chute, while on either side is an open water tank, supplied by the farm water system. There are ten windows on each side of the barn and a ventilation system leading to the ventilators on the roof.

All of these features will have an immediate appeal to the dairyman who a position to predict future conditions. For these reasons the farmer or dairyman who is successful must have his milk and butter manufacturing establishment built and equipped so that he can produce what he has to sell at the least cost. In this way his herd will pay him a handsome profit.

Innocent Little Break.

A Washington woman was called West to her brother, who was feared to be dying. Upon her arrival she was able to write home that a happy improvement had taken place and the sick man was out of danger. A kindly neighbor made inquiries, and when the husband had informed her that his brother-in-law would probably live, the dear soul expressed her sympathy like this:

"Oh, isn't it a pity your wife had to take that long trip for nothing?" She had made a well-meaning little break, even as you and I—Washington Star.

EDUCATION PLAN OF BOLSHIEVICS IN PETROGRAD

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, July 12—More people in Soviet Russia are learning to read than are learning to write. The bolsheviks want people to know how to read in order to facilitate the spread of the "communist gospel." A wide-spread definite system of education is being put into effect, not only for youngsters but also for the elders. The bolsheviks have established schools that are a wide departure from anything known in Russia heretofore. Many features are not radically different from elementary American schools, which the Russians are copying.

The first feature to go by the board in Russia was religion. Schools were formerly conducted by priests and the curriculum was two-thirds religion and one-third education. This order is reversed now. The bolsheviks are teaching two-thirds socialism and communism and one-third education, the latter being mostly reading and writing. Since many of the children in the cities were starving, the bolshevik government in Moscow and Petrograd is serving a noon meal to the children in school. In many schools clothes are being issued to children whose parents cannot supply them.

The education program considered by bolshevik leaders to be far in advance of anything in vogue today practically takes the raising and educating of children out of the hands of the family and places children in the charge of the state. The Russian code of labor requires that everyone work, women as well as men, except that women have eight weeks before and eight weeks after the birth of a child during which they may stay at home.

At all other times, the mother must leave her babies at public nurseries where the state will take charge of them and educate them. Already, some of these nurseries have been established, and the bolshevik government anticipates bringing up the next generation according to certain "proper" theories.

The bolsheviks are working out their educational system in the cities, and thus far have done nothing for the children of the country. They plan to extend their system to the rural districts later. The peasants have been slower to accept the benevolences of paternal bolsheviks.

In developing their educational system the bolsheviks face a tremendous problem, due to the enormous percent age of illiteracy in Russia. Systems of adult night schools have been started in the cities for the grown-ups who do not know how to read and write, or who want to take up special studies. The universities have been opened to everyone free of charge, and for the most part are attended by older people. The normal student body is mobilized at the front. Lectures and meetings are the most popular form of education at present. There are meetings by the thousands everywhere. In soviet Russia there is little else to do but go to a meeting in the evening, aside from a limited number of theatres.

Cafes, to which the Russians used to flock are closed by order of the soviet government. Restaurants and all other gathering places likewise are no more. In place of these European institutions the bolsheviks offer specially arranged meetings, at which are served lectures on socialism, communism and world-revolution.

The state has on its pay-rolls a staff of speakers, many of whom were formerly street agitators in America and England who are engaged as educators of the people. To attract people to these meetings the most noted singers, musicians and dancers give performances after the lectures. The press and the theatre is used to spread bolshevik education. Public places and clubs have been confiscated for the meeting places. In Moscow the nobels' club has been turned into a labor temple and is the principal meeting place. The public has opportunity to attend the theatre and opera on a partly communistic and partly capitalistic basis. All theatres are confiscated by the state, and their former owners are gone. For the most part the stage stars remain the same, monthly bonuses up to three thousand rubles per month being paid them to encourage them to continue the roles.

The opera and ballet in Moscow is as well staged as ever and is beautiful beyond comparison with war time presentations in other capitals of Europe. The audience is the most interesting development. Amongst splendidly dressed people and beautiful women, obviously of the former bourgeoisie classes people who have been able to make their money last through the revolution, one sees unwashed, unshaved, rough workmen dressed in dirty work clothes. They are recipients of tickets distributed free or charge by the government among factory workers and government employees. These sit without removing their caps apparently enjoying the theatre for the first time in their lives.

Ordinary people must buy tickets—only the privileged workman or government employee is a guest—at the box or from scalpers the same as in capitalistic lands.

AMERICA'S IMMORTALS

FRANK GAFFNEY,
Private, First Class, Company
G, 102nd Infantry.

Private Gaffney earned his Distinguished Service Cross by conspicuous gallantry in action near Roncesvalles, France, September 29, 1918. Private Gaffney, an automatic rifleman, pushed forward alone with his gun, after all the other members of his squad had been killed, discovered several Germans placing a heavy machine gun in position. He killed the crew, captured the gun, bombed several dugouts and, after killing four more of the enemy with his pistol, held the position until reinforcements came up, when eight prisoners were captured. His home is in Lockport, N. Y., and his father is Wilber Gaffney, Chapin street.

Put Stomach In Fine Condition

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by hyperacidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten scours in the stomach much like garbage scours in a can, forming acid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescent and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

Five Million Europeans Have Their Eyes Fixed on America for Homes

By F. C. HOWE, New York Immigration Commissioner

Five million Europeans, wearied by the war but still awakened to new points of view by it, are turning their eyes and thoughts to new homes across the sea.

If they can find these homes in the United States they will flock here the moment the opportunity is afforded. Otherwise they will remain where they are. Canada, Australia or South America are not considered for an instant by the great majority.

France has her thousands ready to come. Italy has even more, and England will be largely represented when a propitious time has come. But it is Germany that has the most numerous and most eager company of those who would be emigrants to this country.

The American doughboy is responsible for the new and fervent consideration Europeans are giving the United States. With his head up, a grin on his tanned face and his long legs swinging in a stride that seems never to tire, the American doughboy is altogether the most lovable, the most worth while man in Europe. He does things that nobody else has been able to do; he goes to places that everybody else thinks cannot possibly be reached. There isn't a corner in Europe that the man in khaki hasn't looked into; there isn't a job that he hasn't tackled and completed. The European peoples want the things, the opportunities of the United States, whence came the American doughboy, their new idol.

It is curious that no other land in the world seems to promise them what they are sure they will find here. Not Canada, nor Australia; nor the Argentine or any other country of South America. Politically or by tradition these lands are too closely bound to Europe, and they want no more of the old Europe.

BUNDLES.

Is a baby a bundle? The question is more important than it sounds, for upon the answer rests the right of officers of the United States army to carry their own offspring (singular or plural). Officers must not carry bundles. It is against the customs of the service. It is taboo in the army, says New Republic. It might be considered as a flagrant breach of those rules and manners that have grown up in the old regular establishment for the purpose of hedging about that sacred entity, the officer and gentlemen, with restrictions that would in any way offend against the dignity of his position. Now, is a baby a bundle? You see at once the deep significance of the question. If a baby is a bundle, the officer-father must not carry him. If not a bundle, he may avail himself of this privilege of parenthood and march down the street with his first born, proud in the consciousness that he is fulfilling his parental obligation on the one hand and, on the other, that he is not permitting his dignity to be compromised or causing his self-respect to take a slump.

It is suggested that the former kaiser be interned on the island of Molokai, the Hawaiian leper colony. But why add to the sufferings of those unfortunate?
